RA: Things that clearly have a better fit elsewhere. We've come across a couple of projects in the process where clearly the appeal to this panel is less because, I can't even say why, there are other systems that you could go to and sometimes they're commercial applications, sometimes there are commercial ways in which there is a pitch you can pitch something and if they like it. And it's something that's maybe not breaking the boundaries. These projects are probably things that you find difficulty going to any other channel for. It's the kind of thing that is made because there's nobody else you could go to get it made; it's the sort of impossible project in a way. And not just for scale because it doesn't fit anywhere else. I think once we spot something that, "No, no, this is not the right place to come", it's because there is clearly another avenue that you could pursue. And maybe if you pursued that avenue first you might be able to come back to this fund and say, "Well, we've got some partnership over there and we could come back to here". You can't say specifically what that is.
